Thomas, William, George, John, Kendall and Noah all enlisted, all fought in bloody battles and all were buried (from 1862 to 1864) before they knew the war's outcome.

This book is a microcosm of that study, examining how one family dealt with loss and remembrance. Built on unpublished, original source materials, "Gone to God: A Civil War Family's Ultimate Sacrifice" tells in intimate detail of loss on a personal level, something with which we all can empathize.

Tom and Alleta Sullivan are thought to be the first American parents to have lost five sons 'in the defense of freedom' since the American Civil War. This sacrifice of five sons from one family is matched by at least two English families: the Souls of Great Barrington, Oxfordshire and the Grigsons of Pelynt, Cornwall.
