Leon van Schaik reviews Households, a compelling photographic documentary project by artist and architect Mark Robbins, which portrays actual people in their own homes. Eschewing the 'somnolent' mode of styled interior photography, which is more about what people wish for rather than where they actually live, Robbins captures the intimacy of everyday domestic settings and relationships and in ...

Mark Robbins' Households is a collection of portraits in which the sitters are sometimes sitting rooms (or kitchens or bedrooms), and the people are polished, draped, and arrayed like furniture. Composed to resemble architectural plans or elevations — or in some cases the triptychs of medieval ...
