However, in Reasons to Believe, Pastor Adam Solorio argues that reason need not, and indeed does not, stand in the way of faith. Reason and faith are not mutually exclusive concepts. Examining The Problem of Pain, Pleasure and suffering along with many other issues, Reasons To Believe engages the discussion between reason and faith and argues for faith in a skeptical age.

Hume and Swinburne on reasons to believe in Miracles 1. what if the laws of nature are flawed? Hume 2. If God can do anything then of course he can break the laws of nature 3. Richard Swinburne's Argument for Believing in Miracles Learn with flashcards, games, and more — for free.

In Reasons to Believe, Scott Hahn offers that explanation in a clear, cogent, and compelling manner, by answering the most frequently raised questions about aspects of Church teaching. It is a must-read for Catholics who want to be able to explain the faith they hold and cherish.

The reason to not believe in god/s is pretty simple. The lack of evidence that any exist. It really is that simple. This is very same reason (shared by many god believers, BTW) why most of us (in the USA, anyway) don't believe in Martians, Trolls...

Age of the Earth. About Reasons to Believe. RTB's mission is to spread the Christian Gospel by demonstrating that sound reason and scientific research—including the very latest discoveries—consistently support, rather than erode, confidence in the truth of the Bible and faith in the personal, transcendent God revealed in both Scripture and nature.

More than faith... Believe believe in upper power because of the "fear of death". If a human had a ability of being eternal or cannot die under any circumstances, then we would have said him as the same "power". So it's not about faith, is just "fear" that we die.

Reason #1 – The Christian God is the Only God That Claims to Have a Relationship With You. One of the things that I found that makes Christianity stand out from the other religions is that the God of Christianity claims to have a relationship with His followers. All of the gods in the other religions are either distant, unapproachable, or not available. That's not the case with the Christian God.

I'd like to thank Dr. Carrier for responding to my article "Four Reasons I Believe Jesus Really Existed". I've followed his work for quite a while and recommend that defenders of the view that Jesus never existed take heed of his advice (especially his rejection of mythicist arguments made in the vein of videos like Zeitgeist).. I'm sure he will agree that the debate over Jesus ...

Some would argue that if the evidence for the evidence of god were overwhelming, then individuals would believe in god because they must believe in him, not because they want to believe in him. True No theist has ever believed that the objects of faith are contrary to reason
