I took Ballast practice exam a week before taking PjM and made a 52, but I passed the PjM exam. I thought the practice exam questions were very tricky and subjective. I did feel like reading the questions and explanations from the ballast exam helped me though.

I noticed when I was doing the practice problems from Ballast's PcM section the same things -- really hard questions, with missing information and misleading wording. I spoke to my supervisor at work about it (she tested in 4.0 and used Ballast for everything), and she said that as long as you can get 40-60% correct, you're probably good.
