In "The Purchase", Daniel is a widowed father of five who finds himself an outcast from his Quaker community when he quickly remarries a young woman not of his faith. Daniel makes a new home for himself and his family member in Virginia.

The Purchase is a story of a young widower who is driven by circumstance to move to the American frontier (Western Virginia in the late 1700's). Responsible for his own young children and almost-equally-young new wife, he knows little of what he is getting into.

The Purchase. He is the main 'purchase' alluded to in the title, but this is only one of many decisions which comes at a price, both for Daniel's family and himself. Originally believing he can save Simus, Daniel now must work the boy in order to pay off the cost of buying him. A pacifist, he must purchase his land with warrants paid out...
